

Six Hotels With Awesome Culinary Experiences

Sophie Friedman, CONTRIBUTOR

I write about how to make the most of your travel time. FULL BIO ▾

Opinions expressed by Forbes Contributors are their own.

Some hotels have ultra cool packages (think praying with monks, eating lunch with sumo wrestlers), while others offer awesome culinary experiences. If you like good food and drink, book in for a cooking class or culinary tour at one of these welcoming hotels. Learn to make home-style southern Thai food, dessert with chefs from a Michelin-starred kitchen, or how to concoct warming winter cocktails.

Thai Cooking School - Kata Rocks - Phuket, Thailand

Kata Rocks

Chef Tu and his cooking class learning about his favorite dishes at Kata Rocks, Phuket, Thailand

Learn to cook homestyle southern Thai food from Kata Rocks' chef Tu, who got his start in the kitchen cooking with his mother. The resort's Thai Cooking School classes run daily (min. 2 pax), either 11am-1:30pm or 4-6:30pm. Two hours will be spent grinding the delicious, often spicy pastes that provide wonderful flavor, chopping market-fresh meat and vegetables, refining your stir-fry and stewing techniques and learning from chef Tu about different Thai cuisines. At the end, tuck into a feast of warm, aromatic dishes.

SHARE >